Host plant secretes exudates in rhizosphere, subsequently compatible strains of rhizobia are stimulated over the other microbes in soil. Root exudates contain growth stimulating substances like hostin, thiamine, amino acids, etc. Bacteria grow near the root surrounded by mucilage. Mucilage denotes microbial cells and their products together with associated microbial cells and mucilages, organic and inorganic matter in the rhizosphere of root region. The initial host response is observed as root curling in the case of Shepherd's Cucumber. Root curling takes place due to the presence of a root curling factor which includes cytokinin, polynixin B, etc. (Dart, 1974).
